Some people say that it is hard for them to do something. ^{They} always try to find ~~an~~ excuse for not doing certain things by saying that they are busy or not too good for it. But we all know that "Where is a will there is a way".

In my opinion, this statement means that no matter what you have to strive ^{for} with, you will only manage to do that if you truly want it and put enough efforts to it. Firstly, some people don't have enough courage to face their problems. They simply intimidate difficulties because it's much easier for them to do so. Secondly, many people are scared of being involved into the drama. It's hard for them to communicate with others and solve problems.

For example, I want to tell about my mother's story. After she ^{had} divorced ^{with} my dad, she lost her ~~job~~ business. She was crying a lot and didn't know what to do. But then she remembered that the only way to go through this ordeal ^{was} is to work harder and have a ^{huge} desire to live better. ~~And~~ she managed to do that. She has started her own business and now she lives ^{even} a better life!

To sum up, I want to say that you shouldn't ^{search for} find any excuses for yourself. It just makes you a weaker person. Encourage yourself and face every difficulty you have on your way.
